Police Brutality Resources

The History

Pb-resources was born in the wake of the tragic deaths of George Floyd and Breonna Taylor at the hands of police. Because of this, it was clear that our criminal justice system continues to target and demonize Black people disproportionately. Pb-resources was created as an aid to both protestors and people who supported dismantling injustices from home. It has given protestors access to safety and legal information and other resources, and has given those supporting from home the tools for re-education and policy change.

Our goal

Pb-resources gives a platform to the many battles people are fighting within their communities. It showcases local actions that are committed to dismantling racial injustices especially within police departments. With this resource, people also have the tools to educate themselves on these unjust systems with podcasts, movies, books, and so much more. Additionally, they are given the tools to support Black creators and platforms directly. Their are also target pages that help support groups within the Black community that deserve equal time and attention including our Black LGBTQ+, Trans, and female communities. We believe access to information will change the world, so we are making it easier than ever to do just that.

About

Pb-resources is built by Alexis Williams, a 19 year old Computer Science major at New York University. Alexis is passionate about using her platform to dismantle stereotypes about women in STEM, and represent minority women in STEM as an African American and Latina coder. Alexis has been using her voice to talk about racial injustices since she was 11 years old and continues to do that with pb-resources. She has hope in seeing a fair and just America for all in the future.

Future

We hope to continue to provide resources for people to understand the impact of different policies and systems on Black communities, whilst continuing to uplift and center Black voices. We hope to continue to push marginalized groups within the Black community to the forefront of the conversation. Pb-resources is looking to continue expanding in platform and medium in order to provide an endless stream of resources that help us march forward in the fight for equality and the end of injustice.
